Combating Implicit Bias

What steps has the firm taken to combat implicit bias in recruiting (e.g., interview training, behavioral interview questions, blind resume review, etc.)?

We offer a global interviewer training module on our internal learning and development platform) which provides "best practices" on interviewing techniques to ensure that our interviewers take a holistic approach in treating and evaluating all candidates fairly. We capture feedback through written evaluations, which are compiled and discussed as a committee to determine final offers. The Hiring Committees in our New York, Washington, DC and Houston offices are made up of a diverse group of experienced partners, counsel and associates. During the recruiting season, the committees meet 2-3 times a week to review and compare candidates. One of the main responsibilities of the committee is to hold the rest of the partnership accountable to ensure that the candidate experience is uniform and inclusive.

Summer Associates

In what ways does the firm support diverse summer associates (e.g., mentoring, training, events, etc.)?

Our attorneys take a leading role and are involved in all aspects of the recruitment process from pre-recruitment to post-offer outreach, which continues throughout the summer. Prior to the start of the program, our summer law clerks are offered the opportunity to opt into our diverse mentoring program where they are matched with at least one diverse attorney as part of their "mentor team." During the ten-week program, we host a number of presentations focused on our commitment to diversity and inclusion, including an interactive discussion with our Global Director of Inclusion and leaders of each of our nine affinity groups. Our summer law clerks are invited to join (and actively participate) in our affinity group meetings, events and programming held throughout the summer. In 2023, we welcomed two amazing speakers to the firm: Ethnomusicologist and Julliard professor Fredara M. Hadley who shared her personal history of Juneteenth and illustrated the impact music has had on African American communities past and present. In addition, Professor Kenji Yoshino, who currently serves as the Chief Justice Earl Warren Professor of Constitutional Law at NYU School of Law and faculty director of the Meltzer Center for Diversity, Inclusion and Belonging, hosted a breakfast workshop focused on the importance of allyship. The discussion was guided by many of the principles in his latest book, Say the Right Thing.

ADVICE TO CANDIDATES

Advice

What advice do you have for candidates who are looking for a diverse and inclusive work environment? What questions should they ask when interviewing to help them assess the extent of a firm's commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion?

First and foremost, candidates should expect a diverse and inclusive work environment from every firm that they are considering, and this message should be clear from the outset, requiring no extra research or prompting by the candidate. We believe diversity and inclusion is a broad umbrella which encompasses many practices, and we encourage recruits to identify what is most important to them about diversity and inclusion in big law; be it specific mentoring programs, pro bono work around racial justice, or recruitment efforts aimed at strengthening the pipeline of minority talent. Firms with a genuine focus on diversity and inclusion will be easily able to point out examples of these initiatives. Most importantly, candidates should not shy away from asking the pointed questions and sharing specific ideas on how we can continue to do better and generate change.
